

Key Communications Inc. Privacy Policy

We are dedicated to protecting your right to privacy. Any information you give to Key Communications Inc. will be handled with the greatest care, and will not be used in any way to which you have not consented. Any and all information collected at this site will be kept confidential and will not be sold, rented, loaned or otherwise disclosed without your permission.

Browser information gathered on the website is used to improve the design of the site, especially the usefulness and quick accessibility of materials posted on the site. Our website logs are not personally identifiable, and we make no attempt to link them with the individuals that actually browse the site.

We do not sell or share e-mail addresses or any other visitor information with third parties. E-mail addresses, which visitors volunteer in order to receive e-mail online updates are kept confidential.

From time to time we rent or exchange the names of our users in order to maintain a strong and effective readership base and to provide additional financial support for our work. However, Key Communications Inc. honors all requests of any reader or contributor to not share his or her name with any outside organization or group.

We use on some of our websites third-party advertising companies to serve ads when you visit. These companies may use information (not including your name, address, email address, or telephone number) about your visits to this and other websites in order to provide advertisements about goods and services of interest to you. If you would like more information about this practice and to know your choices about not having this information used by these companies, click here (<http://www.networkadvertising.org/>).

The same pledge to respect your privacy applies to any individual who either joins or contributes online via this website. Subscribers and contributors have and may exercise the choice of having Key Communications Inc. keep their name private or occasionally share it with other organizations.